MORI JURY HELD UP BY ONE BALLOT FEDERAL AGENT HERE TO TAKE CENSUS

Conference On Street Ordinance

Mayor Fern has heaved another brick at the Supervisors who favored the Mutual Telephone agreement, by signing Ordinance 15, commonly known as the street excavation ordinance. There promises to be a strenuous mix-up now, as the much-talked-of ordinance is now a law, for the last section says it shall be in force from and after the date of its approval, which was on October 25th.

By Supervisor Logan it is felt that the Mayor has done the members an injustice and broke his word with them. Mr. Logan says the Mayor agreed not to sign the ordinance until the telephone agreement was settled. Quinn is at a loss to understand the Mayor's position, while Kane, Aylett and Cox appear to be lined up with His Honor.

At any rate, the gauntlet has been thrown down to the Mutual, and the fight is now on in earnest. The telephone people have made no move to commence excavation work in the streets, but it is announced that they will shortly, which will precipitate a test case. The Mayor, it is understood, will stand for the enforcement of the ordinance, backed up by the charter, which Deputy County Attorney Milverton says contains ample authority showing the Board of Supervisors' control of the streets. Aylett is standing pat on the matter and intends to see the thing through to a finish. Quinn, on the other hand, says the city needs a new telephone system, and regrets that any obstacle has been placed in the way.

It is expected at the meeting of the Supervisors tomorrow noon that a conference will be held with members of the Merchants' Association, according to a recent letter addressed to the Mayor, who in turn has referred it to the Board. The Mutual will probably have some representative present, and a warm discussion is promised. For those who have not read the ordinance, full details can be found on another page of the Bulletin today.

NORMAL SCHOOL TEACHER AND SMITH COLLEGE GIRL

She Is Living in Reno, Nev., With Intention of Getting Divorced
From Dowsett — Prominent Family.

Reno, Nev., Oct. 16.—There has been residing in Reno since last July a prepossessing young woman of only nineteen summers, who does not deny that she is a member of the local "divorce colony." Owing to the desire of this talented girl—for she is a mere girl, and a Smith College girl at that, having graduated a year ago last June—to live quietly and avoid publicity, she has busied herself with various diversions, free from public notice, and few residents are aware of her presence. Yet she is a girl who has a history as interesting as it is unique. Miss Florence G. Batterson lived with her father, a prominent business man of Philadelphia, until she entered college. Completing her studies, the young woman went to Honolulu to accept a position as instructor in the Government Normal School. She soon became infatuated with David Dowsett, a half-white and one of the heirs of the famous Dowsett estate of Hawaii, who was engaged in the real estate business and a member of the University Club, Honolulu. Dowsett was already the husband of a native of Hawaii, but he quickly secured a divorce, it is said, from the dancer that he might marry the young American girl.

The wedding occurred the day after Christmas last year, but the wedded bliss of the newly mated couple was destined to be short-lived. According to report, his actions became such that within three months serious trouble arose in the Dowsett household, the young bride resigned from her position in the Normal School and departed from the islands. She came to Nevada, and here she has remained to establish the required residence. A favorite daughter of the family, she is in constant communication with her father, and her half-brother, F. Parker Warren, one of the wealthy property owners of Yonkers, N. Y.

Col. W. F. Denny, quartermaster-general of the United States Marine Corps, arrived on the Korea this morning from the mainland. Col. Hung Jury In Mori Assault Case

Despite the absolute and admitted evidence of guilt that was presented by the attorneys for the prosecution in the case against Mori, the Japanese who attempted to assassinate Editor Sheba on August 3 last, one man saw fit to vote not guilty when the jury took its first ballot this morning. According to the reports this man is W. E. Tirrell, who has served on many juries in the Circuit Court.

On just what grounds a juror could vote not guilty is a mystery to everyone who has followed the case. All that the defense asked for was a verdict of guilty of assault with a weapon "imminently and obviously dangerous to life" in place of the "intent to murder," specified in the indictment.

At 3 o'clock no verdict had been returned.

The arguments before the jury this morning were not lengthy but the merits of the case were gone into thoroughly. The argument for the prosecution was begun by Attorney M. F. Prosser. He paid particular attention to the claim of the attorneys for the defense that when Mori attempted to assassinate Sheba on August 3 last it was entirely without premeditation. Prosser declared that it was impossible to credit the defense with setting up any reasonable case at all, the sole excuse for the act being that Mori believed that he was insulted and drew the knife and plunged it repeatedly into the body of the Japanese editor.

Prosser declared that as long as the laws of Hawaii were to receive serious consideration at the hands of jurors, a defense of the nature presented by the attorneys for Mori could not be regarded with seriousness. Prosser declared that the attack was not a defense of the nature presented by the attorneys for Mori could not be regarded with seriousness. Prosser declared that the attack was not a defense of the nature presented by the attorneys for Mori could not be regarded with seriousness.

Attorney E. A. Douthett took about an hour to tell the jury what was expected of them from the viewpoint of the defense. He maintained that the claim of premeditation made by the attorneys for the prosecution had not been substantiated, and that the attack occurred in the heat of passion.

City and County Attorney Cathcart made the closing argument and declared that he would rather have the jury return a verdict of acquittal than to return a verdict for a minor offense charged in the indictment. Mori was charged with an assault with an intent to commit murder, the defense asking for a verdict of assault with a weapon, obviously and imminently dangerous to life.
